

NATIONAL TRUST FOR SCOTLAND MEDIA RELEASE

17 January 2019

ENJOY OUTLAW KING IN THE COMPANY OF ROBERT THE BRUCE

Bannockburn Visitor Centre to hold exclusive screening and Q&A with film's crew

The National Trust for Scotland is holding an exclusive screening of the Netflix blockbuster, Outlaw King, at its Bannockburn Visitor Centre in Stirling on Saturday 26 January.

The visitor centre will feature two showings, an afternoon session at 2pm and an evening session at 7.30pm.

Both events will begin with a 20 minute tour by Dr Callum Watson, one of the Historical Advisors on Outlaw King, with a compelling overview of the historic events that inspired Scottish film director David Mackenzie's hit.

There will also be a question and answer session with other key contributors: Chief Historical Advisor Scott McMaster appearing at the afternoon session and the film's First Assistant Director and Co-producer, Danny McGrath, taking questions in the evening.

Attendees will be met on arrival by a re-enactment team from the National Trust for Scotland getting guests in the mood for the event by giving them opportunity to mingle with Robert Bruce, James Douglas, and other characters from the film.

Tickets are £5 per person. For further information or to book tickets visit <https://bit.ly/2CwmmCm>
